

class at Platte Canyon High School. After several horrific hours, the gunman ended Emily's young and promising life. This act robbed the Keyes family of their precious daughter and the Bailey community of its tranquil security.

Emily was beloved by all who knew her. They described her as "sweet," "beautiful," and "polite." A member of the volleyball, speech, and debate teams, this active, bright, and industrial girl exemplified the Bailey community.

She also possessed a beautiful soul, as was demonstrated by one of her final acts. In a moment fraught with terror, Emily chose to express love. This brave woman sent a text message to her father that read simply "I love U guys."

Following her death, Emily's family asked for "random acts of kindness" because, they said, "there is no way to make sense of this and it is what Emily would have wanted."

This is the legacy for which Emily Keyes shall be remembered. And this is the memory that I rise to honor today.

HONORING JUDGE RICHARD SHEPPARD ARNOLD (1936-2004)

(Mr. BOOZMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a person who has been described as "perhaps the best judge never to serve on the Supreme Court." I wish today to honor and remember Judge Richard Arnold as we prepare to name the Federal building in Little Rock after one who has given so much to his country.

A Texarkana native, Judge Arnold attended Exeter, Yale, and Harvard, and clerked for Justice William Brennan before returning to Arkansas to set up practice in Texarkana.

President Carter named Judge Arnold, a Democrat, to the district court in 1978 and, in just over a year, named him to the Eighth Circuit. He rose to chief judge and served on the Eighth Circuit with his brother Morris, a Republican.

Judge Arnold's life represents one of commitment to the rule of law and of service to one's country. I am proud to see the Federal building in Little Rock named after him, and I am proud to speak of him here in the well of the House.
